

Table of Contents

9	Foreword	Evert Gummesson
11	Preface	Jim Spohrer
19	Introduction	Tiziana Russo Spina and Cristina Mele
27	1. COMPLEXITY AND A POST-HUMANIST EPISTEMOLOGY
27	1.1. Introduction
28	1.2. Complexity
32	1.3. Actor-network theory: Dealing with sociotechnical processes
36	1.4. The practice-based approach
41	1.5. Duality of technology and sociomateriality
45	1.6. Comparing approaches to sociomaterial reality
48	1.7. Towards a post-humanist epistemology
51	2. FROM DIGITAL OBJECTS TO DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION: OPENING UP THE COMPLEXITY OF NETWORKED CONNECTIONS
51	2.1. Introduction
53	2.2. Internet of Things and Internet of Everything
59	2.3. Cognitive computing and artificial intelligence
65	2.4. Digital transformation and the complexity of networked connections
69	3. SERVICE (ECO)SYSTEMS: CO-CREATING VALUE IN EMERGING COMPLEX CONTEXTS
69	3.1. Introduction
72	3.2. The service system perspective

77	3.3. Smart service systems and human-centred service systems
81	3.4. The service ecosystems perspective
87	3.5. Institutions and institutional mechanisms as drivers of change in service ecosystems
93	4. INNOVATING IN PRACTICE AND PRACTISING INNOVATION
93	4.1. Introduction
96	4.2. The traditional approach to innovation: The normative and linear narratives
99	4.3. The Service-Dominant logic approach to innovation: The narrative of innovation within social practices
103	4.4. A practice learning approach to innovation: The narrative as learning practices
113	4.5. Innovating replaces innovation: The narrative of the texture of practices
119	4.6. An integrative framework
123	5. MARKET PRACTICES
123	5.1. Introduction
126	5.2. Integrative practices
142	5.3. Representational practices
151	5.4. Normalising practices
165	RESOURCING PRACTICES
165	6.1. Introduction
168	6.2. Networking practices
176	6.3. Knowing practices
185	6.4. Expansive learning practices
195	Conclusions? A New start
199	Afterword
	Paolo Stampacchia
201	References
231	punto org book series